Dr. Jill Carnaghi currently works at Washington University in St. Louis as the Assistant Vice Chancellor for Students and Director of Campus Life. Her areas of responsibility emphasize co-curricular activities for students by working with students, staff, and faculty to enhance student learning outside of the classroom.

She has served on a variety of leadership roles with the American College Personnel Association, most recently she was the co-chair for the ACPA and NASPA Joint Meeting held in April 2007 in Orlando, FL. She also served as treasurer and president of ACPA.

Her recent work, Job One: Experiences of New Professionals in Student Affairs, co-authored with Dr. Peter Magolda, focuses on nine narratives written by new professionals about their introduction and transitions into student affairs work.
