It's all about passage—the act or process of moving through, under, over, or past something on the way from one place to another. ACPA--College Student Educators International has been working on the roots of student development and success since 1926. We've asked hard questions because we know that the dialogue that is born out of these questions will ultimately unite us in creating safe and growth-centered spaces for all of us. Ultimately, we believe that every wall is door between human beings in relationships of all types. Our willingness to see that opening is an intentional practice that can heal the world and create peace to the heart and mind of the practitioner.

Dr. Cindi Love is the Executive Director of ACPA—College Student Educators International at One Dupont Circle in Washington, DC. Founded 90+ years ago, ACPA is one of the longest tenured higher education associations working on the “roots not the shoots” of holistic student development. Dr. Love has been a regular visitor to the White House supporting vulnerable youth and as a globally recognized advocate for non-violence and decriminalization of the lives of LGBT people.

From 2010-2014, Dr. Love was the executive director of Soulforce, a national organization dedicated to nonviolently confronting and ending anti-LGBTQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer) discrimination through relentless nonviolent resistance. She started her career as a speech pathologist and faculty member in special education. In 2008, she was named one of the “most loved women” in the United States by Go Magazine in New York and to Women at the Helm by the same magazine in 2011.
